Reading Number 16
from Congressional Government
by President Woodrow Wilson, Ph.D.

[N.B. Though only part of sentence is highlighted, the whole reference as described is to be read.]

Note: President Wilson was the only president to have an earned doctorate.

p. 103, ¶1– “This, plainly put, is the practical result of the piecing of…”

Ibid.– “Each branch of the government is fitted out with a small…”

Ibid., ¶ 2– “Moreover, it is impossible to deny that this division…”

Ibid., ¶ 2, line 7– “There is no one supreme, ultimate head– whether…”

p. 104, ¶ 2– “It is, therefore, manifestly a radical defect in our…”

Ibid., ¶ 2, last sentence– “It is quite safe to say that were it possible to call…”

p. 105, ¶ 2– “The dangers of this serious imperfection in our…”

p. 106, ¶ 2, line 5– “It is a government in which every officer may talk about…”