ORENT YOUR ATTITUDE

Work as hard as possible every day. That alone will help set you apart from a lot of people.

It’s about never saying no to a given opportunity.

Patience is key. Any experience after graduation will be beneficial to get you to your ultimate goal. I was pressing t-shirts in December and now I’m working for an NHL franchise.

Persistence and patience have been my keys to success after graduation.

Put yourself in awkward, unfamiliar, or uncomfortable situations. The more you do, the more confident you’ll become in any situation.

Working hard and doing the best you can in the workplace can help you advance in your career.

Show interest in what you are doing, and your peers at work will teach you everything you need to know to be more successful.

Laziness and entitlement are unacceptable.

CULTIVATE NETWORKS

Every experience both academically and socially was an avenue to my success after graduation.

Be active on campus and make valuable connections.

Get involved in everything possible on campus and make strong connections with professors and staff.

Get your name out there, especially in your related field.

Focus on building your resume and taking advantage of every opportunity presented to you.

It is important to know ahead of time the path you want to take, and apply to opportunities as early as possible.

GAIN EXPERIENCE

Always try to get an internship. It helped me out a lot.

Internships can be such amazing experiences, whether you enter that field or not, and help in ways you can’t imagine.

Completing internships both on and off campus help future prospects tremendously.

Do internships!

Get any possible experience in your field. Internships are key when looking for jobs.

CHOOSE WISELY

Prepare for the future early, network, have long-term and short-term goals.

Remember that it’s ok for your career path and goals to change.

Find a career that makes you happy, even if it isn’t the field in which you studied.

Follow your interests, not just where the money is. If you do what you love, the money will follow.

Be yourself. I know it’s cliche, but just do you and good things will come.

Take chances, step out of your comfort zone, and always be open to new opportunities.
